SENATOR J. P. DOLLIVER.

SENATOR J. P. DOLLIVER of Iowa, who is taking a conspicuous part in the senate interstate commerce committee's investigation of the railroad rebate question, was born in that part of Virginia that afterward became West Virginia. He made a speech near his old home in the last campaign and, growing reminiscent, said, with tears in his voice:

"How well I remember this place! This is where I was born. Over there is the chestnut grove where I have gathered many a bushel of chestnuts. Why, I suppose when I was a boy I gathered fully fifty bushels of chestnuts here."

"Yes," shouted a bull chested man in the rear, "and you have been peddling them out ever since!"

Senator Dolliver is fond of telling at his own expense a story of one of his campaigns in Iowa. "I had arranged," said he, "to speak to a large outdoor meeting in a certain town in Iowa. It appears that, hearing of my proposed speech, one of the prisoners in the county jail was for some reason or other extremely desirous of being in the audience that I was to address. This man wrote a note to the sheriff expressing admiration of my oratorical powers and asking permission to go to the town square, where I was to speak, and pledging himself to return to jail just as soon as I should have finished my remarks."

"Well, it appears that the sheriff was a Democrat and, what is more, a bit of a humorist, for he indorsed upon the back of the prisoner's note the following: 'Permission hereby granted; remainder of the sentence remitted.'"

The boycott instituted by the merchants of China against products and manufactures from the United States puts Sir Cheung Liang Cheng, the present minister of China to this country, in a difficult and delicate position. He is desirous of friendship between his country and America, yet must stand firm for what his countrymen consider their interests. They have determined to boycott American goods in retaliation for the exclusion policy of the United States and to maintain this attitude until the American government agrees to admit to this country without restriction all Chinese except those of the laboring class. The Chinese minister has much admiration for American institutions and has spent much of his life here, for he was educated at Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., and Harvard university. While at Andover one of his friends was Timothy L. Woodruff, who has since been lieutenant governor of the state of New York. At a dinner soon after Sir Cheung's appointment as minister Mr. Woodruff jestingly announced that China's representative was the originator of curved balls in the great American game of baseball. The art of pitching curves has been traced back to a period antedating that of the distinguished Chinaman's student days at Andover, but the fact remains that he played baseball in those days and was considered by his fellow students an expert at the game. He wore a baseball uniform and kept his cue tightly rolled under his arm. He took to rowing, too, and one year was stroke out of the Andover crew.

Senator Charles Dick of Ohio, who was a conspicuous figure in the recent Republican state convention of Ohio, took the late Mr. Hanna's seat in the senate and is a born politician. He is forty-six years old now, and twenty years ago was keeping a feed store in Akron in which the polling place of his ward was set up on election days. As Dick saw the voters coming into his store year after year to deposit their ballots he came to learn the game of politics and has never forgotten how to play it. Like most politicians, General Dick is fond of a story, and he told one recently of an old man who used to make deposits in the bank where he was once a clerk. "I don't know whether this man was a miser or not," said Senator Dick, "but he had that reputation. I do know that he would sometimes make in one day three or four deposits—now $1, now $2, now 10 cents. A man once went to him and said:

SENATOR CHARLES DICK.

"I'm a doctor, and I'll give you $10,000 if you'll let me kill you. I want to see how, cut in a certain vein, a man dies."

"The old miser wrinkled his forehead. 'Let me think a bit,' he said. 'There was a long silence. 'Well?' said the visitor. 'Give me till tomorrow,' said the miser. 'I'll think this business out thoroughly and tomorrow I'll give you a decisive answer, yes or no.' 'So the man went away, and the next day he returned. The miser said to him:

"I can't let you kill me for $10,000, friend. I've figured it all out, and I find that your money would be no good to me after I was dead. I'll tell you what I will do, though. I'll let you half kill me for $5,000."

The Duke of Sutherland, who is now on a visit to America, is the owner of the Catalina, one of the finest steam yachts in the world, and of the hundred ton schooner yacht Lisette, both of which fly the colors of the Royal Yacht Squadron. Though he owns about one-fifteenth of Scotland and also large estates in England, has a long name and an ancient title, the duke is democratic and unassuming in manner. In England he is considered a very talented man, and he has a wife who is known both for her beauty and the brilliancy of her mind. Literature is her leading passion and automobile driving comes next in her affection. The duchess is especially fond of driving big motor cars. She is not with her husband on his present trip. She began writing at an early age, and her stories have had much popularity, while her widespread philanthropy has earned her the title of the "Charity Duchess."

The duke is fifty-two years of age and says if he were a little younger he would have entered as one of the competitors for the kaiser's cup.

Homer Davenport is known the country over as a cartoonist, but comparatively few persons know that he is a farmer, a breeder of Arabian horses and a collector of rare birds and beasts. Mr. Davenport has made a good deal of money caricaturing trust magnates, and much of it has been spent in the pursuit of his hobby. He has a poultry and bird farm at Morris Plains, N. J., which is one of the most extraordinary places of its kind in the United States. Mr. Davenport was born in Oregon and raised on an Oregon ranch, and when the Lewis and Clark fair was proposed for Portland he determined to make an exhibit at the exposition of a typical Oregon ranch and show on it his birds and beasts, which are valued at $82,000. He has carried out the plan, and it is said to be one of the most novel features of the fair. Included in the collection are thirty-six varieties of pheasants, every country in the world being represented; water fowl, storks, cranes, jungle fowl, wild turkeys, pigeons, fancy poultry, quail, traponans, Angora goats and Arabian horses.

In illustrating the effect of his cartoons Mr. Davenport once told a story of an old negro from Georgia named Dr. Brown who went into the lobby of the senate chamber at Washington and met the late Senator Hanna, whom he recognized at first sight. When Mr. Hanna asked how it was that he was recognized by a man who had never seen him Dr. Brown answered that he had seen pictures. After being urged he confessed that these pictures were cartoons. He acknowledged this with reluctance and added by way of apology:

"Well, Mr. Senator, to tell you the truth, they didn't look like you a little bit, but I knew you by 'em in a minute."

William Nelson Cromwell, the New York lawyer who was recently installed as head peacemaker in the Equitable Life Assurance society's controversy, has figured in several recent national and international episodes, including the Santo Domingo and Panama incidents. He has been very successful as an adviser of corporations and is a type of the business lawyer of today who aims to excel in knowledge of commercial enterprises and the laws under which they are conducted rather than in attaining oratorical triumphs before juries.

Mr. Cromwell is fifty-one years of age, is a native of New York city and a graduate of the Columbia Law school. He is noted as having received some of the largest fees ever paid in the history of litigation. For his services as receiver of Decker, Howell & Co. in 1891 he got from the court a fee of $200,000 and, in addition, received a silver service as a testimonial from the firm. For settling the affairs of Price, McCormick & Co. he is said to have received $100,000 in one fee. His work as general counsel of the Panama Canal company of France brought him, it is supposed, the largest reward of the kind on record, for he is popularly credited with receiving $1,000,000 as his fee in this case. It is even said that $2,000,000 would be nearer the sum that he realized in connection with the canal project. Although there was much corruption in France in the matter of the Panama canal, Mr. Cromwell has made the assertion that in the passage of the Panama canal bill in the American congress not a single dollar was illegitimately expended.

Erroneously Thinks by Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is no hair preparation that will do that but Newbald's Herpicide. Herpicide by killing the dandruff germ, saves the hair free to grow as healthy nature intended. Destroy the cause you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
